

The Pointe Garden Club

"When in the course of human events..." are the first words of the Declaration of Independence, which was formally adopted on July 4, 1776, by representatives from the thirteen original colonies. Events leading up to this historic date in American history began over a decade earlier, culminating with the battles of Lexington and Concord in April, 1775, the official beginning of the Revolutionary War.

The key elements of our garden are the quote from the Declaration and a floral representation of the "Betsy Ross Flag", which has come to be used as a patriotic emblem of the American Revolution.

In our celebration of the 250th signing of the Declaration, we should not lose sight of the extreme sacrifices and hardships our ancestors endured to secure our Independence. We recognize and salute this bravery, represented in red for these sacrifices, dispersed throughout the sedum field surrounding the Betsy Ross flag.

May God Bless America!
